Mozilla Firefox doesn't support BitTorrent. 1. Technical Field The present disclosure relates to a power cable assembly. 2. Description of Related Art A conventional power cable assembly includes an electrical power cable and a safety device. The safety device includes a plurality of conical side covers and a plurality of ribs covering a lateral surface of the electrical power cable. The side covers are respectively mounted to opposite lateral surfaces of the electrical power cable, so that the ribs are received between the side covers. When a short-circuit current occurs in the electrical power cable, the side covers transfer a force to the ribs and facilitate the ribs to attenuate the short-circuit current flowing through the electrical power cable. However, when the electrical power cable has a wire end connected to an electronic device, the wire end may be electrically welded to a wire of the electrical power cable. In this case, the short-circuit current flows from the electronic device to the wire end through the wire of the electrical power cable. The ribs may only attenuate a part of the short-circuit current, and the remainder of the short-circuit current may flow from the wire of the electrical power cable to the wire end. Thus, the ribs have less capability to attenuate the short-circuit current. What is needed, therefore, is a power cable assembly which can overcome the above-described shortcomings.
